Prostate Scotland is delighted to be named as the chosen charity for the Erskine Golf Club Pro/Am in September.

"More men in Scotland need to be getting checked to detect prostate cancer earlier on. It's the most common cancer in men, impacting 1 in 10 men in Scotland, and the figures are rising.

"It's important for men to know that early-stage prostate cancer doesn't always show symptoms, and with no national screening programme for prostate cancer in Scotland or the UK, Prostate Scotland advises men from the age of 50 to go to their GP and request a prostate-specific antigen (PSA) test.

"Men who are "high risk of developing prostate cancer", those with a family history – grandad, dad, uncle, brothers, and Afro-Caribbean men, are advised to get tested as early as 45."

For men who want to know more, they should visit Prostate Scotland's online symptom checker to be aware of what signs to look for: www.prostatescotland.org.uk

Erskine Golf Club in Bishopton Renfrewshire, near Glasgow, is arguably one of the finest golf courses in the West of Scotland designed by Troon Professional Willie Fernie, James Braid and Dr. Alister MacKenzie.

This golf course simply has to be played to be appreciated. The Club was established in 1904 and caters for all, from the individual to groups and societies. Erskine Golf Club hosted the Scottish Professional Championship in 1991 and also The Scottish Youths Championship in 2007.

We hope you can join us for this exciting and prestigious event.
